Perspectives on Education in Africa

Series Editor: Kerry J Kennedy

Series Co-Editors: Juliet Perumal, University of Johannesburg, Elizabeth Henning, University of Johannesburg, Joseph Divala, University of Johannesburg and Linda Gardelle, ENSTA Bretagne.

The African continent is at a crucial moment in its history. Conflicts, political disappointments, developmental difficulties and poverty issues are well disseminated by the international media, but it also has a promising demography and hopeful economic growth. Education is at the heart of the challenges facing the continent, and research into Africa’s 21st century potential is of increasing interest to international scholars and policymakers alike.

This series aims to examine institutions regarded as fundamental in helping African countries face major challenges across the Continent. It seeks to offer tools for analysing, understanding and decision-making concerning contemporary issues of education in Africa. Believing that perspectives should not be observed, analysed and strategized from outside, the series draws on local knowledge and experience, promoting interaction between African and non-African scholars in order to explore the implications for the future, and the ways in which education in Africa can be enhanced, influenced and developed.

In focusing on education, the purpose of the proposed Series is to examine institutions that are regarded as fundamental in helping African countries face major challenges across the Continent. This series will seek to offer tools for analysing, for understanding and for decision-making concerning contemporary issues of Education in Africa.
