

Our departments collaborate with universities from across the globe. Student exchange programmes are in place with the Western Sydney University, Edge Hill University and Saimaa University of Applied Sciences. Students from both Saimaa University of Applied Sciences and from Edge Hill University have participated in the UJ Department of EMC's annual Gariiep Dam rescue event. Furthermore, students from the University of Western Sydney and from Saimaa University of Applied Sciences have engaged in clinical rotations in South Africa. Master of Emergency Medical Care students at UJ may also be involved in research collaborations with other universities.

Fifth Year Paramedic students from Saimaa University of Applied Sciences working a clinical shift with clinical facilitator Mrs Helen Slabber and a UJ student.

A group of Master's degree students from Saimaa University of Applied Sciences join UJ in a rescue exercise.

A UJ student working a clinical shift in Lappeenranta in Finland.