INTRODUCTION:
Given the financial turmoil caused by the COVID-19 lockdown and the downgrades by rating agencies, the number of businesses experiencing financial difficulties is set to increase dramatically. The demand for trained and experienced business rescue practitioners is thus likely to continue rising. The programme is also aimed at directors, lawyers, legal advisors, auditors, financial advisors, bankers, businesspersons, and trade union representatives. The Faculty of Law of the University of Johannesburg is now offering its short learning programme in business rescue in a fully online format. The programme covers the scope and underlying principles of business rescue and thoroughly analyses the substantive law and procedure of the legal process. It also focuses on the practical implications of business rescue.

HOW WILL YOU LEARN?
The programme is broken down into 3 manageable modules and includes a range of interactive content, including live video lectures, case studies and access to various further educational resources. The duration of the programme is 3 months (July – September 2020) culminating in an online examination at end of the course.

APPLICATIONS:
The closing date for registration is 19 JULY 2020.
