This sought after book contains all important historical, financial, political, economic and military details about the colonisation of the territory of Rhodesia from the period 1898-1900. It is an extremely rare copy, which is hard to find even in National and University Libraries!

It contains the following maps:

1) Southern Rhodesia: The Gold Districts of Mashonaland & Matabeleland
2) North-Eastern Rhodesia: Roads, Post & Telegraph Offices

The British South Africa Company (BSAC or BSACo) was established to secure British government backing to exploit the expected mineral wealth of Mashonaland. Its first directors included the Duke of Abercorn, Cecil Rhodes and the South African financier Alfred Beit.
This is a scarce first edition about the colonisation of south east and South Africa, and The Mozambique Company, a public company for mining and colonial enterprises in what is now known as Mozambique.
Albert Brodrick was involved in mining in the ZAR. This early tract deals with the ZAR and parts of Southern Rhodesia especially the exploitation of Mauch’s gold discoveries in Matabeleland and Tati.
This is an early record of one of the earliest gold prospecting companies on the Witwatersrand.
