4. DEFINITIONS AND ABBREVIATIONS

4.1.1 This Policy provides for the offering of two types of collaborative qualifications:

4.1.2 Joint degree

- a) A joint degree, as a single qualification, is conferred at the successful completion of a jointly-offered single academic qualification offered collaboratively by UJ in collaboration with another institution(s).
- b) The requirements of the study programme will involve: time spent by the student at all institutions involved and feature a jointly-developed and integrated curriculum or a single research topic resulting in a single dissertation or thesis.
- c) The governance of the programme and the life cycle of the students involved are governed by a formal agreement between the collaborating institutions.
- d) The study programme is normally completed in the same period as a similar single degree programme.
- e) Certification (in accordance with the UJ Policy: Academic Certification and Related Matters and the UJ Policy: Graduation, as well as the legal requirements in this regard): A single degree certificate, issued and signed jointly by the partner institutions; or a certificate issued by each of the institutions involved, with the proviso that each certificate must refer to the joint nature of the qualification and specify that the qualification is being conferred in conjunction with the other institutions involved (the partnership agreement must specify that the credentials used by the graduate must make it clear that this is a single qualification).

4.1.3 Co-badged degree

- a) A co-badged degree, as a single qualification, is conferred at the successful completion of a Master's or Doctoral programme, offered collaboratively by more than one HEI.

- b) The governance of the programme and the life cycle of the students involved are governed by a formal agreement between the collaborating institutions.
- c) The student enrolls at only one institution – the ‘enrolling institution’.
- d) The enrolling institution is responsible for the curriculum.
- e) A part of the curriculum (limited to 50% of the credits) is offered by the partner institution(s) but the degree is awarded by the enrolling institution only.
- f) Certification: A degree certificate, issued and signed by the enrolling institution. The enrolling institution recognises the contribution by the partner institution(s) by a reference to the partner institution(s) on the degree certificate.
