Edgar C. Taylor is a Lecturer in the Department of History, Archaeology and Heritage Studies at Makerere University. He holds a PhD in Anthropology and History from the University of Michigan and a MA in History from Makerere University. His research examines urban protest, racial politics and institutional life in twentieth-century Uganda. He has published articles in Africa, Journal of Eastern African Studies, History in Africa, History of Photography, and Comparative Studies in Society and History on topics including the affective and legal politics of decolonization and racialized citizenship as well as the dynamics of public heritage in Uganda. He co-edited Decolonising State & Society in Uganda: The Politics of Knowledge & Public Life for James Currey and a special issue of History and Anthropology on 'Expulsions: Knowledge, Memory and Materiality in Africa'. He is currently writing a book Infrastructures of Exclusion: Authority and Everyday Politics in Urban Uganda, 1959-1972 about racial populism and urban governance in the years preceding the Ugandan Asian expulsion of 1972. He recently led a research group in Makerere's 'Archiving, Memory and Method from the Global South' project. He has co-curated two exhibitions of national history at the Uganda National Museum and has worked with the Uganda National Archives and the Uganda Broadcasting Corporation on projects to preserve and catalogue their collections. Before joining Makerere, he was a postdoctoral fellow with the University of Johannesburg and the University of the Witwatersrand.
